FACTSHEET - April 2025

Strategy Objective

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by a benchmark.

Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Market Commentary

The month of April was dominated by President Donald Trump and his tariffs, nothing else really mattered. Bond and equity markets experienced significant volatility as Trump announced his “reciprocal tariffs” on April 2 (dubbed “Liberation Day” in his own words). This was followed by a dramatic shift on April 9th, when heightened turbulence in bond and equity markets prompted Trump to announce a ninety-day delay to their implementation.

The last weeks of March, moving into early April, witnessed a simultaneous decline in the value of the dollar, U.S. equities and U.S. bonds. This market turbulence is what prompted President Trump to pause the implementation of his tariffs.

Trump's retreat allowed markets to recover, leaving them virtually unchanged for the month. However, the situation was very different in China, where concerns over Trump's planned 145% tariff on Chinese exports to the U.S. weighed heavily on the market. European and UK equities continue to outperform other developed market peers, benefiting from the lack of mega-cap technology stocks and a surge in the value of defence stocks. This divergence highlights the relative attractiveness of European and UK equities, which has been reflected in fund flows as asset managers reallocate away from the U.S. in favour of Europe.

Fixed income markets rallied towards the end of the month, while gold and bitcoin thrived. In contrast, oil fell sharply, reflecting fears of a looming recession. Despite the market's turnaround in April, it has still been one of the worst first 100 days for any U.S. President – all self-inflicted.

The key question facing markets is; will there be a recession? The scale of Trump's tariffs, even if they do not reach the levels of his delayed reciprocal tariffs, will still act as a significant tax hike for U.S. consumers and businesses, adding pressure to the economy.

Business and consumer confidence have declined significantly, and unless Trump dramatically changes course, a U.S. economic slowdown – or even a recession – seems increasingly probable. Trump's chaotic policy making is leaving investors overwhelmed and uncertain.

We expect the U.S. dollar will continue to decline as foreign holders of U.S. assets continue to reduce their exposures. Trump's actions have rapidly made the U.S. an unattractive ally and trade partner. Our strategy remains focused on holding fewer U.S. dollar assets and preparing for slower growth in the U.S. and globally. Central banks will respond once growth slows significantly, but a turbulent period may precede their response.
