Strategy Objective

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by a benchmark.

Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Asset Allocation

Portfolio Date: 31/03/2026

March has been the most challenging month for markets since the era-Covid meltdown. The U.S. and Israeli military action against Iran, which began on 28th February, has significantly disrupted global energy markets.

Asset prices tumbled sharply over the month, with all sectors down bar energy. There were no effective safe havens as technology, healthcare, consumer staples, and even defence and gold were negative on the month. Fixed income markets also declined as expectations shifted from pricing interest rate cuts to rate hikes. The logic being that the energy shock would drive inflation higher, forcing central banks to respond by tightening policy to contain inflationary pressures.

Over the past year, we have consistently highlighted several key investment themes, including defence, technology, energy (particularly electricity), commodities such as gold, mining, and financials. We have also added selective exposure to oil and gas within portfolios.

It is reasonable to expect global defence spending to continue rising, not just in Europe but worldwide. President Trump is currently seeking an additional $200 billion from Congress, taking the 2026 U.S. defence budget to around $900 billion, with indications that spending could rise to as much as $1.5 trillion in fiscal 2027.

Technology investment is on track to rival defence spending, with the large technology companies planning to invest more than $600 billion this year. The build out of AI data centres requires ever increasing amounts of energy, with utilities and governments working alongside the technology sector, which is providing much of the capital. This investment cycle is highly resource intensive, particularly for raw materials such as copper. Against the backdrop of developments in the Gulf, it is also likely that investment in conventional fossil fuels will increase.

Government deficits are expected to continue widening as countries seek to fund higher defence spending and potentially subsidise their economies to offset higher energy costs. We therefore remain cautious on long duration fixed income, a view that would change only if global growth were to slow materially.

Until hostilities cease and shipping through the Strait of Hormuz resumes, financial markets are likely to remain exceptionally volatile.

Important: the value of investments and the income from them can go down as well as up. You may not recover what you invest.
