Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Market Commentary

Hopes of a US-Iran peace agreement faded in early July as hostilities resumed, with Iran targeting shipping and US military facilities in the region. The US responded with strikes on Iranian military assets and restrictions on Iranian oil exports through the Strait of Hormuz. Markets reacted in line with expectations, with Brent crude briefly reaching $100 per barrel while equities and bonds weakened. The AI semiconductor sector extended its correction following its strong second-quarter rally. South Korean chipmaker SK Hynix fell sharply after its US ADR listing, contributing to broader weakness in the KOSPI as leveraged retail investors reduced exposure. By month-end, sentiment improved after President Trump suggested a diplomatic resolution remained possible. Although Iran denied negotiations were underway, oil prices retreated to around $85 per barrel.

Equity market performance was mixed. AI-heavy indices such as the NASDAQ, Nikkei 225 and KOSPI declined, while European and UK equities delivered modest gains. Fixed income markets also generated negative returns as concerns over inflation and rising fiscal deficits pushed yields higher. Despite elevated market volatility, gold, silver and Bitcoin were largely unchanged.

The major central banks all kept policy unchanged. They, like market participants struggled to makes sense of the volatility of energy prices and what kind of second order impact it might have on inflation and inflation expectations. New Federal Reserve chair Kevin Warsh held is second press conference and he didn't leave the markets any wiser on what to expect from the Fed. US bond markets continued to nudge rates higher and Chair Warsh almost seemed please suggesting that markets could be tightening so the Fed didn't have to.

Yields rose in the UK as concerns over new Prime minister Andy Burnham's spending plans disturbed markets and European yields rose as the combination of ever rising social spending and now sharply rising defence spending bothered the long end of bond markets.

Despite all the volatility in energy prices and the steady rise in interest rates equity earnings have been excellent.

We expect more of the same in the months ahead as tech spending on capex continues along with a steady rise in global defence spending and investment spending to build out more electrical power generation capacity. Labour markets remain firm and while inflation is still above target levels, the central banks are patient and will be measured in their attempts to reign it in.

Important: the value of investments and the income from them can go down as well as up. You may not recover what you invest.
