

Nexus Global Dynamic Port A GBP

FACTSHEET - September 2026

Strategy Objective

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by a benchmark.

Investment Process

The Nexus Global Dynamic Portfolio is an actively managed, globally diversified, equity portfolio. The manager has the mandate to seek value globally and is not constrained by benchmarks. Stock selection is driven by a firm understanding of an individual company's underlying business fundamentals and how they relate to an ever-changing world. It is important to consider the interplay of monetary and fiscal policies around the world and how significant changes in these policies may affect equity markets. High conviction ideas are generated by a combination of internal and external research and quantitative and technical analysis. Owning equities and investing in the stock market allows an investor to participate in the future growth of the world. A diversified and liquid portfolio of equities will benefit in an ever-changing and growing world economy, where innovation and technological advances continue to drive new investment opportunities. One of our objectives is to identify future trends and themes using our internal analytical capability and to find ways to allow the Dynamic Portfolio to participate.

Market Commentary

The third quarter was shaped by three key developments. First, tensions between the U.S., Israel and Iran escalated again following the collapse of the memorandum of understanding in late June. While military activity was less intense than in the previous quarter, disruption to global shipping increased significantly as both the U.S. and Iran claimed control over passage through the Strait of Hormuz. Oil prices rose above $100 per barrel by quarter end, despite a recovery in crude oil and refined product flows through the Strait. The more immediate economic and inflationary risk remains the shortage of refined products, particularly diesel, as refinery damage in the Gulf and Russia continues to constrain global supply.

Second, interest rates moved steadily higher, driven by rising energy prices, additional monetary policy tightening, expectations of further rate increases and improving economic growth.

Third, business confidence remained resilient. European purchasing manager surveys pointed to stronger growth prospects, with similar improvements seen in the U.S. and other developed markets. Following weaker growth in late 2025 and early 2026, economic activity is now recovering.

Market performance during September and the third quarter reflected these developments. Fixed income markets experienced particularly weak returns, extending losses over the quarter and year to date. Currency and commodity markets were mixed: the U.S. dollar strengthened, gold declined, while Bitcoin and oil rallied. The yen recovered from previous lows, supported modestly by coordinated intervention from the U.S. and Japan.

We expect continued upward pressure on bond yields until there is greater certainty regarding a resolution of the U.S.-Iran conflict. However, we are less concerned when rising yields reflect stronger economic activity. Robust corporate earnings continue to support employment, wage growth and capital expenditure, particularly in AI, where demand for computing capacity remains strong. While inflation appears sticky and may require modest further policy tightening, we do not expect a repeat of the 2021-2023 tightening cycle.

We remain well diversified, favouring long-term themes including technology, defence, energy, mining and healthcare. Within fixed income, we prefer shorter to intermediate maturities and higher quality credit, reflecting concerns around persistent inflation, government borrowing and higher yields, while maintaining flexibility as conditions evolve.
